

Street Talk Scenario Slips

The car stereo is on – your favourite tune is playing. As you drive along you feel as though you are cruising to the beat of the music.

You are driving two of your friend's home. They're talking about their latest relationships and the conversation is getting hot.

You often get up too late to eat before heading out into the day. Sometimes you skip on lunch too, so the thought of food is just great when you are driving home.

You are concerned about a friend who sometimes says their life isn't worth living and who seems to take huge risks when driving.

Getting your Restricted Licence was a real milestone. It made you feel as though you were an adult at last.

You see yourself as a person with really good self-control and believe that this is reflected in a way that you drive.

You see yourself as a risk-taker but you always seem to get away with things that catch other people out.

One of your friends drives very fast. When you are the driver you feel as though you are a slug by comparison.

It's a lazy Sunday afternoon. You've got nothing better to do so you get in the car and just drive.

Street Talk Scenario Slips

You sometimes drive younger members of your family and friends to school. Getting them there safely is very important to you.

None of the older drivers in your home has ever had a crash. They make it very plain that they expect you to be a safe driver too.

Sometimes, when you drive home after working late, you feel really tired.

One of your friends insists on smoking while sitting in the front passenger seat when you are driving.

You pride yourself on having really sharp reflexes. You know you will respond fast in a tight driving situation.

You've just found out that you've been successful in meeting a big personal challenge.

You're feeling very excited as you get into your car to drive home.

There's an important exam coming up. You've got so much on you don't know when there will be time to study for it. You worry about this as you drive along.